Kamar Scott

MUSIC BUSINESS

“Excuse me, while I kiss the sky.”

– Jimmy Hendrix

Kamar Scott was born and raised in San Antonio. The youngest son of a single mother, he always had a joy and fascination for music. He learned to play guitar and drums and found passion in the bass guitar, soon finding his way to the soundboard where he could stretch his musical creativity.

Right after high school, he went to St. Philips College to learn more about music with the goal of becoming a music producer. After studying at St. Philips, he transferred to Texas State for their audio engineering program. While there, he was able to get a job at the Texas State radio station.

Soon after, he returned to the Alamo Colleges and San Antonio College to be a part of the music business program and get a degree in music business. With the same big dreams in mind, he ventured forth to learn from the most incredible professors and to work with all kinds of bands.
